

AN 8
ESSAY
ON
REASON.

Celestis RATIONIS opus deducere mundo Aggredior ——— MANIL. LIB. I.

L O N D O N: Printed:

D U B L I N:

Re-printed by GEORGE FAULKNER, Bookseller in Essex-Street, opposite to the Bridge, MDCCXXXV.

THE CONTENTS.

REASON coeval with God, &c. Verse 1 to 6.
Transfused into Adam; Its particular Nature and Operations in the Paradisaical State, V.

7 to 52.

How impaired by the Fall, V. 53 to 62.

The Objection (V. 63 to 70) Why Adam in a purely rational State, shou'd be judged by a positive Law, casually obviated; and the Expediency of such a Law demonstrably proved, V. 71 to 115.

The Fall actual, but not minutely explicable, V. 116 to 122. Depravation from thence real, yet no real Injury to us, V. 123 to 136.

Next follows, a True State of the Nature of Reason, as Man now is. Its Extent, Bounds, proper Sphere, Exertion, Perfection, &c. V. 135 to 208.

Reason every Man's Duty, &c. V. 209 to 236.

Its Procession, or Progress from the first perception to its height, V. 237 to 258.

Its Character (in an objective Sense) as Reason or Truth in general, V. 229, &c.

Hence is obviated an Error in Deism, of taking human Reason for the abstracted, or divine, V. 265, &c.

Next is also shown, how Revelation particularly assists Reason, and that 'tis no more an Injury or Force than moral Obligation, V. 285 to 294.

An Objection of the Sceptics, viz. What Reason is, &c. proposed and answered, V. 295 to 308.

Author's State of the Case. I. Reason as in God, V. 39, &c. II. As in Things, Actions, Morality, Arts,

The CONTENTS.

Arts, &c. V. 315 to 346. [Farther State and Reply to the Objection above, V. 295, &c. casually taken in here, V. 347 to 366.]

III. Reason as in Man. Its Perfection in the abstracted Sense, and its Modes and Degrees of Perfection and Imperfection in the exerted Sense, V. 367, &c. Its Perfection always proportionable to the Capacity and Application of the Agent V. 379 to 416.

Human Nature considered in the same Lights as human Reason, and proved to stand in the same Need of Revelation, V. 417 to 432.

Neither one nor the other curbed hereby, but properly limited, and truly Assisted, V. 433 to 452

Reason proved de facto, from the whole course of Antiquity, never to have done what the Deists imagine, but rather the contrary, V. 453 to 468.

The Antients never had a Religion purely without Positives, nor could they (the Antients) allowing the Supposition above, have done what Revelation did, V. 469 &c. Were not Free-thinkers, in the Modern Sense of the Word, V. 481, &c.

Owed much, as well as the Moderns (tho' the latter will not own it) to Revelation, V. 489 to 506.

The Advantage of a Revelation in our present State, and Reasons a priori, why it should take place, V. 507 to 548.

God's particular Goodness herein, V. 548, &c.

Expostulation with the Deists, V. 554, &c.

How one ought to act in such Circumstances, V. 563 &c.

A Prayer offered up to God on this occasion, wherein are express the Sentiments, conduct, and wishes of a truly reasonable Man, and a Christian both, V. 570 to 604, the End.

A N
E S S A Y
O N
R E A S O N.

FROM Time's vast Length, eternal and unknown,

Effence of God, coeval REASON shone; *

Mark'd each recess of Providence and Fate,

Weighing the present, past, and future state:

'Ere Earth to start from Nothing was decreed, 5

'Ere Man had fal'n, or God vouchsaf'd to bleed!

Part of Herself in Eden's pair she saw,

Where Virtue was but practice, Nature law :

Where

* Est quidem vera Lex, recta RATIO, natura congruens, diffusa in omnes, constans, sempiterna. Huic legi nec promulgari fas est, neque delogari ex hac aliquid licet, neque tota abrogari potest Nec erit alia Roma, alia Athenis, alia nunc, alia posthac. Sed omnes Gentes, & omni tempore una Lex, & sempiterna, & immutabilis continebit. Tull. de Rep. L. 3. presero'd by Lactant. L. 3. c. 6.

DEUS & RATIO quæ cuncta gubernat. Manil. L. 2.

Where Truth was almost felt as well as seen,
(Perception half) and scarce a mist been : 10

Where homage strove in praise and pray'r t'adore,
By one to honour, and by one implore ;
While Temp'rance cropt the herb, and mixt the bowl,

And health warm'd sense, and sense sublim'd the soul.

Fear was not then ; nor malady, nor age ; 15
Nor publick hatred, nor domestic rage ;——
No fancy'd want, no loss of taste decreed
The honest ox to groan, the lamb to bleed :
No earth-born Pride hath snatch'd th' Almighty's
rod,

O'erturn'd the balance, or blasphem'd the God ; 20
No Vice, (for vice is only truth deny'd)
Nurs'd Ignorance, or Nature's voice bely'd.

Hail blissful pair ! whose sense if farther wrought,
Had weaken'd, stretch'd, and agoniz'd the thought :
Created both to know and to possess 4 25
What we, unhappy, can but barely guess ;
Truth to survey in clearest lights arrang'd,
'Ere frauds were form'd to rules, or words were chang'd,

'Ere ev'ry act a double aspect bore,
Or doubts, intending well, perplex us more. 30

You saw the Source of Actions and the End :

Why things are opposite, and why they blend ;
How from eternal causes good and ill
Subsist ; how mingle, yet are diff'rent still.

How Modes unnumber'd soften and unite ; 35
How strength of falshood glares, and strength of light.

Half of the God came open to your view :
 You hail'd his presence, and his voice you knew :
 That God, whose light is Truth, whose vast extent
 Of pleasure, Good—self-form'd and self content !
 Unhurt by years, unlimited by place, 40
 At once o'erflowing Time, and Thought, and Space!

By knowing him, you knew him to be Best :
 (For the first Attribute infers the rest,)
 Knew from his Mind why boundless Virtue rose, 45
 Why his unerring Will that virtue chose,
 Not something sep'rate (as the Deists dream)
 To circumscribe his pow'r, contract his schemes ;
 For Reason, tho' it binds th' immortal will,
 Is but a portion of the Godhead still ; * 50
 This learn, ye Wits, by sacred myst'ry aw'd,
 And know, that God is only guide to God ! †

This the First knew, their heart, their knowledge clear,
 Their reason perfect, as their frame could bear ;
 Till lust of change and more than mortal pride 55
 Infring'd the law, the penalty defy'd :
 Curst by themselves in Eden's blest abodes,
 Possessing all, yet raging to be Gods :
 Thence Sin unnerv'd the sense, obscur'd the soul,
 And still increas'd, like rivers as they roll : 60
 For Nature once deprav'd, like motion crost,
 Ne'er of her self can gain the pow'rs she lost.

But here the moderns eagerly dispute, ——
 ' Why in a state of knowledge absolute,
 ' (Where unmixt truth came naked to the view, 65
 ' And the first glance cou'd pierce all nature thro' :)
 ' God

* Quod quavis, Deus est—Manil. L. 4.

† Ille, Legis hujus Inventor, Disceptator, Lator.
Tull. de Rep. preserv'd by Lact.

- God should an Edict positive decree
- And guard so strict th' inviolable Tree?
- This were, for trifles, sagely to contend,
- To barter truth for show, for means the end. 70

Agreed: But first our mighty sect shou'd prove
 God has no title, to our faith or love: †
 To awe submissive, reverential fear,
 To hope, to homage, to the grateful tear;
 That truth omniscient may sometimes deceive,
 That all-wise bounty knows not what to give;
 First let the Critics of the Godhead make
 Such Theorems clear, and then this Answer take. 80

That Adam, tho' all Moral truth he saw,
 Yet scarce a Motive had t'infringe that Law:
 How could he honour other Gods than One?
 How change a spirit into sculptur'd stone?
 How, the first morning Life inform'd his frame, 85
 Durst he profane his Maker's sacred name!
 How without Parents could intemp'rate rage
 Spurn the hoar head, or mock the tears of age?
 Why should he cover? when supremely blest—
 Or why defraud? When all things he possess— 90
 The bridal Bed for whom should he deceive?
 Or whom assassin, but his much-lov'd Eve?
 Hence 'twas that man by Positives was try'd;
 And hence behold the Godhead justify'd.

Add, that the Reasoning Faculty of man 95
 Serv'd not as now, when Adam first began:
 Much tho' he saw, yet little had he try'd,
 Nor known Experience, Nature's surest guide:

See

Αὐτὸ μὲν γάρ τὸ ΘΕΙΟΝ ΑΝΕΝΔΕΕΣ, αἱ δὲ ΤΙΜΑΙ τῇ;
 ΗΜΕΤΕΡΑΣ ΩΦΕΛΕΙΑΣ ἐνεκα γίνονται. Salust de Deo,
 c. 15.

See then, a previous cause and reason giv'n
 Why a Reveal'd Insect should come from heav'n,
 Which op'd at once the natures and the pow'rs
 Of earth, air, sea, beasts, reptiles, fruits, and flow'rs.

Effects, as yet un-caus'd, thence Adam knew,
 The rage of poisons, and the balms of dew :
 Smil'd when the gen'rous courser paw'd the plains,
 Yet shun'd the tygres, and her beauteous stains:
 Nurst the soft dove that slumber'd on his breast,
 Nor touch'd the Dipsas' poison-flaming crest.

How had he trembled in that blest abode,
 Had not his Sov'reignty been taught by God? 110
 Or how, unlicens'd, durst he wanton, tread
 Ev'n the green Insect in its herbal bed ?
 For Life, like Property, is no man's slave,
 And only He can reassume, that gave. 115

[This by the way :] The history of the Fall,
 And how the first-form'd loins contain'd us all,
 Dread points! which none explain, and few conceive,

We wave for ever, Doctors, by your leave.
 Ethnics and Christians a Corruption grant;
 The Manner How, still wicked Wits may want.
 So, if they doubt what, Sound, or Vision be ?
 Thence let 'em prove we cannot hear, nor see!—

'Spite of their Mock'ry also, plain is this,
 That no man had a plea to Adam's bliss.
 Grant that the Parent wastes a vast Estate— 125
 Is he for that, just object of our hate,
 Provided all remains that Use requires,
 Or Need can crave, for Ends and for Desires ?
 To point out Evil, Virtue's heights to reach,
 This life to soften, or the next to teach ? 130

Shall Man, because he wants a Seraph's flame,
 Not taste the Joys proportion'd to his frame?
Knowledge enough for Use, for Pride is giv'n;
Strong, but not Sensitive as truth in heav'n;
 Clear, yet adapted to the mental Sight; 135
 For too much truth o'erpow'rs, as too much light.

REASON, like Virtue in a Medium lies;
 A hairs-breadth more might make us mad not wise,
 Out-know ev'n Knowledge, and out-polish Art,
 Till Newton drops down giddy—a Descartes! 140
 For Reason like a King who thirsts for Pow'r,
 Leaves Realms unpeopled, while it conquers more—
 Admit our eye-sight, as the Lynx's, clear;
 T' attain the distant, we o'ershoot the near:
 [For Art too nice, like Tubes reverse, extends 145
 Things beyond things, till ev'n the object ends.]
 Hence Nature, like Alcides, saw 'twas fit
 To fix th' extremest stretch of human Wit:
We, like an Insect clamb'ring up a ball,
 Mounts to one point, and then of course must fall,
 No wiser, if its pains proceed, than end,
 And all its Journey only to descend!

The Question is not therefore, how much light
 God's Wisdom gives us, but t' exert it right:
 Enough remains for ev'ry social End, 155
 For practice, theory, self, neighbour, friend:
 Then call not Knowledge narrow, Heav'n unkind,
 One Curse there is, 'tis Wantonness of Mind.—
 No human Plummet can Abysses sound;
 Agreed; yet rocks thy reach and shelving ground;
 Thus Reason, where 'tis dang'rous, steers us right,
 And then dissolves amidst th' Abyss of Light.

'Tis Reason finds th' Horizon's glimm'ring line
 Where realms of Truth, and realms of Error join:
 Views

Views its own Hemisphere with thankful eyes, 165
 Thinks Nature good in that which she denies ;
 While Pride amidst the vast abrupt must soar —
 Alas, to fathom God is to be more !

Then dare be wise, into thy self descend,
 Sage to some purpose, studious to some end ; 170
 Search thy own heart, the Well where knowledge lies ; *

Thence (not from higher earth] we catch the skies ;
 Leave Mystry to the Seraph's purer thought
 Which takes in Truth, as forms by streams are caught :

Leave Lust to brutes whose unhurt sense is such, 175
 That ten fold transport thrills at ev'ry touch :
 Holding the middle sphere where Reason lies,
 Than these more temp'rate, as than those less wise.

Each pow'r of Animals in each degree,
 Ev'n second Instinct, Knowledge is to thee : 180

Th' effect as certain, tho' the birth more slow,

For like the Rose it must expand and blow :

Time must call forth the manhood of the mind ; †

By study strengthen'd, and by taste refin'd :

Its Action open, as its Purpose true, 185

Slow to resolve, but constant to pursue ;

Weeded from passion, prejudice, and pride,

Mod'rate to all, yet steady to one side.

Such once was KNIGHT : In word, in action clear ;

Ev'n in the last recess of thought sincere ; 190

Great

Ἐνδὸν βλέπει, Ἐνδὸν ἢ ΠΙΠΤΗ Τῆ ἀλ' αὐτῇ, &c. M. Anton. L. 7.

¶ Præterea gigni pariter cum corpore, & una

Crescere sentimus (pariterque senescere) mentem.

Inde ubi robustis adolevit viribus ætas,

Consilium quoque majus, & auctior est animi Vis. Lucret.

L. 3.

Great without Titles, Virtuous without Show,
 Learn'd without Pride, and Just without a Foe ;
 Alike Humane, to pity, or impart ;
 The coolest head, and yet the warmest heart.
 O early lost ! With ev'ry Grace adorn'd ! 195
 By me, (so Heav'n ordains it) always mourn'd ;
 In Life's full joy, and Virtue's fairest bloom
 Untimely check'd, and hurry'd to the Tomb :
 Torn ev'n from Her whom all the world approv'd,
 More Blest than man, and more than man Belov'd !

How few, like thee, truth's arduous paths can tread,

Trace her flow streams, and taste them at their head ?
 See how scarft sages, and pale schoolmen roam
 From Art to Art ? their Mind a Void at home.
 For oft our Understanding apes our eyes, 205
 Forgets itself, tho' all things it descries.
 Minds like true Pictures are by distance prov'd,
 And Objects proper, only as remov'd.—

Yet Reason has a fund of charms t'engage,
 Art, study, meditation, youth, and age : 210
 Beauty which must the Slave, the Monarch strike,
 Homage which paid not injuries both alike ;
 Virtue at once to please and to befriend,
 (Great Nature's clue, observant of its end)
 Such were the paths the rubric Antients trod, 215
 The friends of Virtue, and the * friends of God.

Science like this, important and divine,
 • The good man offers Reason, at thy shrine :

Sees

* Wisd. of Sol. c. vii. v. 27.

Sees Thee, God, Nature, (well explain'd) the same :
 Not chang'd when thought on, varying but in name ;
 Sees whence each aptitude, each diff'rence springs,
 How thought ev'n acts and meaning lives in things :
 Or else examines at less studious hours

The Thinking Faculty, its source, its pow'rs :
 How, stretch'd like Kneller's canvas first it lies, 225
 'Ere the soft tints awake, or outlines rise :
 How, till the Finishing of thrice seven years,
 The Master-Figure Reason scarce appears :
 Sighs to survey a Realm by right its own,
 While Passion, [fierce co-heir] usurps the throne ;
 A second Nero, turbulent in sway,
 His Pleasure, Noise ; his Life one stormy Day ;
 Headstrong in love, and headstrong too in hate,
 Resolv'd t' enslave the Mob, or sink the State ;
 Sad farce of pow'r, sad anarchy of things, 235
 Where brutes are subjects, and where tyrants kings.

Yet in this infant state, by stealth, by chance,
 Th' increasing mind still feels a slow advance,
 Thro' the dark Void ev'n gleams of Truth can shoot,

And love of Liberty upheave at root. 240

No more the tender seeds unquicken'd lie,
 But stretch their form and wait for wings to fly :

Sensation first, the groundwork of the whole,

Deals ray by ray each image to the soul :

Perception true to every nerve receives 245

The various impulse, now exults, now grieves ;

Thought works and ends, and dares afresh begin ;

So whirlpools pour out streams, and suck them in ;

That

¶ Quid enim aliud est Natura quam Deus & Divina Ratio toti mundo, & partibus inserta? SENEC.

That Thought romantic Memory detains
 In unknown cells and in aerial chains ; 250
Imagination thence her flow'rs translates,
 And Fancy emulous of God, creates :
Experience slowly moving next appears,
 Wise but by habit, judging but from years ;
 Till Knowledge comes, a wise and gen'rous heir, 255
 And opes the Reservoir averse to spare :
 And, Reason rises, the Newtonian Sun,
 Moves all, guides all, and all sustains in one.

Bright Emanation of the Godhead hail,
 Fountain of living lustre, ne'er to fail ; 260
 As none deceiving, so of none deceiv'd : *
 Beheld, and in the act of Sight believ'd,
 In Truth, in Strength, in Majesty array'd,
 No Change to turn thee, and no Cloud to shade !
 Such in her self is REASON— : Deist say, 265
 What hast thou here t' object, t' explain away ?
 Think'st thou thy Reason this unerring Rule ? †
 Then live a madman—and yet die a fool !
 God gave us Reason as the Stars were giv'n,
 Not to discard the Sun, but mark out Heav'n ; 270
 At once a Rule of Faith, if well employ'd,
 A Source of Pleasure, if aright enjoy'd,
 And Point, round which th' eternal error lies
 Of fools too credulous, and wits too wise ;
 A faithful guide to comfort and to save,
 Till the mind floats, like Peter on the wave :

Then

* At neque decipitur Ratio, neque decipit unquam.

MANYL.

† Ratio Diis Hominibusque communis : hac in illis consummata est, in nobis consummabilis. SENECA. Epist.

Then bright-ey'd Hope descends, of heav'nly birth
 And Faith, our Immortality on Earth,
 A Saviour speaks! lo darkness low'rs no more,
 And the husht billows sleep against the shore. 280
 If this be hardship let the dying heir
 Spurn back his father's aid, and curse his care?
 If this be cruel, partial, or unwise,
 Then perish infidel, and God despise!

Nor flows it hence, that Revelation's force 285
 Chains Reason down, or thwarts it in its course:
 Since Obligation, first of Moral ties
 Binds thus, and yet no Tyranny implies:
 We grant that men th' eternal motive see,
 Yet motive, where there's choice, still leaves them
 free;

True Liberty was ne'er by License gain'd 290
 Nor are Liege-subjects Slaves because restrain'd;*
 Restriction shows the check, but none creates;
 300 Prescience finds, but not necessitates.

Yet still the Wits with partial voice exclaim, 295
 What art thou Truth? what Knowledge? but a name:

In short, are Mortals free, or are they bound?
 Tell us, is Reason something, or a sound.

Friends 'tis agreed: Behold the gen'rous part,
 My soul at once unfolded, and my heart; 300
 Too brave to be by Superstition aw'd,
 And yet too modest to confront the God:
 Chain'd to no int'rest, bigot to no cause,
 Slave of no hope, preferment, or applause!
 For those who clave to Truth for Virtue's sake, 305
 Enjoy all party-good, yet nothing stake.

Thou

* Idcirco omnes Legum Servi sumus, ut liberi esse possimus. TULL.

Thou then, O Source of uncreated Light,
Hallow my lips, and guard me whilst I write!

First in that Pow'r, [to whose eternal thought
No outward object e'er one image brought, 310
The part, the whole, the see'er and the seen,
No distance, inference, or act between :]
REASON presides, diffusing thence abroad
Thro' truth, thro' things—the Test, the Point of God. *

As perfect Reason from the Godhead springs,
(And still unchang'd if perfect ;) so from Things 315
Truth, Actions—in their kind and their degree
Starts real meaning, difference, harmony. †
These all imply a Reason, Reason still
A Duty, good if sought, if sought not, ill ; 320
Hence in the chain of causes, Virtue, Vice,
And thence Religion, take their gen'ral rise.

God first creates, the ref'rence, nature, force
Of things created must result of course ;
As well might Sense its evidence disclaim, 325
Or Chance sketch out Earth's, Heav'n's stupendous frame,

As well might Motion to be Rest consent,
As well might Matter fill without extent,

As

* Deus totus, Ratio est. Senec. nat. quest. L. 1.

† Est profecto aliquid Natura pulchrum atque praeclarum, quod sponte sua preteretur, quodque spreto & contempta voluptate, optimus quisque sequeretur. Tull de Senect.

Quodque Vere dicimus, etiamsi a nullo laudetur, Natura est laudabile. Idem de Offic.

Etenim illud ipsum quod Honestum Decorumque dicimus per se nobis placet, animosque omnium Natura specie sua commovet. Ibid. L. 2. c. 9.

* Ἐπεὶ δὲ ΑΓΑΘΟΝ ὁᾶν αὐτὸ ΕΛΛΟΙ ΕΝΕΚΑ ἡ ἀρετῶν ἀβραυτος. Arist. Rhet. c. 6.

As Things (instead of being what they ought,)
Sink into hazard, whim, caprice, or nought. 330

Hence in each art the Great, the Glorious wars,
For Science only copies Moral Charms, *
Mysterious excellence! the dome, the draught,
The lay, the consort swell upon the thought.

The Mind to nobler beauty thence proceeds, 335
The union, colouring, and force of deeds;
Swells in the hero's cause with vast esteem,
Pants for the Patriot, and would more than seem.
Labours with Brutus in the stern Decree,
Yet whispers 'midst his tears, O Rome be free! 340
Envies at Utica the Stoic sword,

Or bleeds at Carthage, Martyr to its word †

These truths congenial, nor devis'd tho' found,
Live in each age, and shoot from ev'ry ground;
Bloom or on Albion's, or on India's coast, 345
Midst Abissinia's flames, or Zembla's frost.

' Yet still the † Wits and Moralists exclaim
' That Virtue's casual oft, and oft a name:
' At Esperanza's Cape (or Jesuits lie)
' Their Baptism's Urine, and their God a Fly; 350
' Old Cato sagely vers'd in Stoic Laws,
' Still hackney'd out his Wife to serve the Cause,
' And Incest, for th' Advantage of a Nation
' Was sacred made by Spartan Toleration:

C

' Midst

* Ita quod non potest in Veritate fieri, id [Antiqui] non putaverunt, in imaginibus factum, posse certam Rationem habere. Omnia enim certa proprietate & a veris Naturæ deductis Moribus traduxerunt in operum perfectiones, & ea probaverunt quorum explicationes in Disputationibus Rationem possunt habere Veritatis. Vitruv. L. 4. c. 2. See also Arist. Poetics c. 23.

† Atil. Regulus. Horat. L. 3 Ode 5

† Le Mothe le Vayer; son Opusculum Sceptique.

|| Locke's Human Understanding. L. 1. c. 3.

' Midst Tart'ry's Desarts, and Cathaya's Sands, 355
 ' In their Horse-scoop the natives wash their hands,
 ' One drop of urine in their chamber spilt
 ' Is certain death, inexpiable guilt ! *
 ' For a huge whore, see Heroes, Kings, at strife ;
 ' But never Virgin there was made a Wife. ‡ 360
 Of all Assertions, these indeed are chief
 T' excite compassion, tho' not shake belief:
 Since from an agent's want of taste or skill,
 It flows not that the rule must needs be ill ;
 For Truth exists abstracted from the mind, 365
 And Nature's Laws are Laws, tho' man be blind.

REASON at most, but imitates the Sun,
 To each is various, and to ALL is one :
 Perfect consider'd in its self 'tis true,
 And yet imperfect as exerted too : 370
 The Mental Pow'r eternal, equal, fixt,
 The human act unequal, casual, mixt ———
 And if such dormant Reason bears no fruit,
 Dead in the branch, tho' real at the root,
 Defect and actual Ignorance are one, 375
 For useless Talents are the same as none ;
 All men may catch the lights of truth 'tis true,
 But the great Question is, if all men do ?

' Oh but, says one, if Reason comes from heav'n,
 ' Nature, or God must deal the Blessing ev'n : 380
 Agreed: and in a prior sense they do ;
 But still t' improve the gift devolves on you ; ||
 Reason in this respect I boldly say,
 (And so do thousands, school-men, church-men,
 lay. No

* Voyages de Carpin ‡ Histoire des Gberifs.

|| *Semina in corporibus humanis divina dispersa sunt,
 qua si bonus Cultor excipit, similia origini prodeunt.*
 SAN. EPIST. 73.

No more is natural and inly-born 385
 Then love, or lust, or pride, or hate or scorn:
 'Tis man's t' exert, exalt, subject, impart;
 Here lies the Honesty and here the Art.

'Tis his, t' improve good sense, but none create,
 Ty'd down to spend no more than his estate: 390
 To strike no notion out, no truth deduce,
 But just as nature sow'd the seeds for use.

This instance urg'd and drawn from mental pow'rs,

Earth each day testifies in trees and flow'rs:
 Culture with skill, and science join'd with toil, 395
 Teach Persia's peach to bloom in Albion's soil,
 As truly nature's produce here, as there
 In its own sunshine and its spicy air. —

For truth, like earth made barren by the fall,
 Just as men labour, tribute pays to all: 400
Plain, if kind Heav'n to blessings shall impart,
 A reasonable head, and upright heart:

For plainness rises in a giv'n degree
 As men are honest, and as men can see;
Quarles may be harder to th' unletter'd clown 405
 Than Hedlin, or Bessu to wits in town.

What's Ethic to the true pains-taking man,
 Who never thinks and cheats but all he can?
 What's Shry's hairs-breadth morals at the Change?

Or Tindal's fitness at Philemon's Grange? 410
 Or solid Reas'ning to the headstrong youth,
 His Tutor, Pain, Experiment his Truth?

In short, one sentence may the whole discuss—
 As we with TRUTH, TRUTH coincides with us:
 This boulds the matter fairly to the bran, 415
 And nothing more wits, bards, deans, doctors can.

NATURE

NATURE like God, ne'er felt the least decay ;
 But human nature has, and oft she may :
 Full in the child th' unfinew'd fire appears,
 More weak by growth, more infantine by years ;
 And ductile vice each new impression takes,
 Passive as air, with ev'ry motion shakes.

Like some true Roman Dome Mankind appears,
 The pile impair'd, but not o'erwhelm'd by years ;
 Ev'n the remains strength, beauty, use impart, 425
 And, faint, or rough, are equal proofs of art :
 Yet nothing but the first creating hand
 Shall fill the shadowy lines, or new command,
 Bid the stretch'd roof to swell, the arch to bend
 The wings to widen, and the front extend ! 430
 Yet as true madmen, most their friends suspect ;
 So Wits for this, shall ev'n their God reject !

Not that my verse Right Reason would controul,
 True Freedom limit, or contract the Soul ;
 Th' exchange were one to bigotry from pride, 435
 A hairs-breadth serves to join them, or divide ;
 Yet proper decencies must still be had,
 Not meanly pious we, nor vainly mad :
 Reason, like Israel, Horeb's place describes,
 But if she gazes wantonly, she dies : 440
 If well-attemper'd, her ethereal light
 Will fix our slippery steps, and gild our night :
 Or else at most we run a rash career,
 Or fare like pilots, who by meteors steer ;
 For, like a mark she's faithful to the view, 445
 But just as distance, force, and aim are true ;
 Then guide, and judge, and guardian of our ways,
 Test of our deeds, and umpire of our praise,
 Source of our joy, and bound'ry of our grief,
 Anchor of hope, and pilot of belief ! 450

True

True to the clear, unbiaſt, humble ſoul,
Which trembling ſeeks her, as the ſteel its pole!

Yet ah, how few ev'n antient times beheld,
(When Greece and Rome in arms and arts excel'd)
Who thro' life's maze the ſteps of Nature trod, 455
Reason their guide, and Truth their unknown God?
The Stagyrite, who bold to heav'n could ſoar,
Trembled at laſt to die, and be no more;
Gods, angels, glories op'd on Plato's view,
Yet judgment quench'd the flames which rapture
blew:

Midſt myriads, who but Socrates appears 460
The birth, pride, effort of three thouſand years!

Nothing the reſt, or worſe than nothing meant,
God was but Chance, and Virtue but Conſent,*
At beſt the Hero's was an impious name; 465
Free Patriots while they bled were ſlaves to fame;
Ev'n Hell was fable, and their bleſt abodes
Of Brutes a Synod, or a Mob of Gods!

What Bramin yet, what Sage of Rome or Greece
E'er form'd one moral System of a piece? 470
Or half an Altar rais'd, or Duty paid,
Unmix'd with rituals, homage, myſ'try, ſhade?
He therefore beſt infers who ſteers by fact,
And weighs not Reason's Pow'r, but Folly's Aſſ:

Which of thoſe godlike antients ever drew 475
The Whole of Ethics juſtly round and true?†
Had Miſſion or to prophecy or preach?
Sanction t' excite, Authority to teach? Nay

* Non Philoſophorum Judicia, ſed delirantium ſomnia. Tull. de Nat. Deor. L. 1.

† Veritatem & diuina Religionis Arcanum Philoſophi attigerunt, ſed aliis reſellentibus, defendere id quod invenerant, nequiverunt, quia ſingulis ratio non quadravit, nec ea, qua vera ſenſerant, in ſummam redigere poterant. Laſſant. de div. Pram.

Nay, ev'n their Rule of Morals and of Life
 Was often wrong, oft various, oft at strife— 480
 'Gainst State or Priest they little durst impart,
 Their lips scarce breath'd the truths that scorch'd
 their heart :

Hence Samos' Sage the current faith advis'd,
 Hence Plato trim'd his Creeds, and temporiz'd,
 And Greece for ‡ one man's head in holy rage, 485
 [A strange example in that mod'rate age]
 More Art employ'd, more Premiums issu'd forth,
 Than all our modern Deists heads are worth.

Nay half the source of most the antients knew,
 From Noah they, as He from Eden drew : 490
 Whence Truth in secret pipes to Memphis past,
 Thence strain'd thro' Jewry water'd Asia last.
 So Nilus wanders mystic in its flow,
 And Columns tost from Tempé feed the Po.

Now too, Wit's Titans spite of all their boast,
 But combat God with his own arms at most :
 The truths they boast of, and the rules they know,
 Seen not, or own'd not, first from Scripture flow.
 So painters us'd to copy, seem t' invent,
 Of aid unconscious, and in theft content. 500
 Faith strikes the light, but pride assumes the same,
 Sure like th' oblig'd t' efface her Patron's name :
 For as when vig'rous breezes drive a fleet,
 Earth seems to stretch, and lab'ring floats to meet,*
 (Solid her self and fixt :) So here 'tis Thus ; 505
 Nor we to God, but God accedes to us.

For ‡ Diogenes.

* Qua vehimur navi, fertur, cum flare videtur :
Qua manet in Statione, ea prater creditur ire ;
Et fugere ad puppim colles, campiue evidentur.

LUCRET L. 4.

For ah, ev'n here when life a journey runs,
 Blest with new day-light and with nearer suns :
 Virtue's dim lights by God's own hand supply'd,
 With Sanction strengthen'd, honour'd with a Guide,
 How few (except instructed first and led) 510
 Can thrud the Maze, or touch the Fountain's head ?
 Observe a Mean 'twixt Bigotry and Pride,
 Hit the strait way, or err not in the wide ?

If Reason then scarce finishes the Best, 515
 Th' unbias'd Few, how fares it with the rest)
 Where Error holds at least a dubious sway,
 A war of thoughts, and twilight of a day ; *
 Where Prepossession warps the ductile mind,
 Where blindfold Education leads the blind : 520
 Where Int'rest biases, ill Customs guide,
 And strong Desires pour on us like a tide ;
 Where Indolence is never at a loss,
 But saunters on to Heav'n, a Saint in gross :
 Where Wit must mince a Gnat (its throat so small :)
 Where Ignorance an Ostrich gorges all ; 525
 Where Zeal her unknown vow of fury keeps,
 And Superstition like an Idiot weeps ;
 Where Persecution lifts its iron rod,
 Bad for good ends, the butcher of the God : 525
 Where Pride still list'ning to her self appears,
 New forms earth's orbit, and new rolls the spheres,
 Holds ev'n th' Almighty in her airy chain,
 Gives back his laws, well meant, but meant in vain :
 Its bravery at best a blund'ring hit, 530
 Its freedom treason, obloquy its wit ;

Its

* Homo non ut a Matre, sed ut a Noverca, Natura editus est in vitam—in quo tamen inest tanquam obrutus, quidam divinus Ignis ingenii & mentis. Tull. de Rep. L. 3. Preserv'd by St. Austin, Contr. Pel. L. 4.

Its vast request just purely to declaim,
 And the dear little licence—to blaspheme ;—
 Say, can cool Virtue here dissuade from ill ?
 Or exil'd Reason—Pandar to the Will ?— 535
 At most a Voice or Miracle may save,
 And only Terrors snatch us from the grave !

Suppose [tho' we disown it oft to be]
 Man from these Errors and these Passions free ;
 Well taught by Art, by Nature well inclin'd, 540
 Steady of Judgment, tractable of Mind,
 The first step's his, (the giving folly o'er,)
 The last, to practise truth, is ten times more.

Ah me, what lengths of valley yet remain,
 What hills to climb, 'ere Reason's height he gain ?
 What strength to toil, what labour to pursue,
 Still out of reach, and often out of view !

Then gracious God, how well dost thou provide
 For erring Reason an unerring Guide !
 To silence Explanation [Myst'ry's foe,] 550
 To lead the tim'rous, and exalt the low ;
 Ev'n to the best, [as all are oft perplex'd]
 Instructive, as true Comments to a text.

Then let each hour's new whim the Witlings swell,
 Heav'n let 'em tutor, and extinguish hell : 555
 Refuse to trust Omniscience on its troth,
 Yet take a lawyer's Word, or harlot's Oath ;
 Then Bigots, when 'gainst Bigots they complain,
 And only singular, because they're vain.*

Grant

* *Catorum profana Philosophia turba imperitorum, vana Sanctitudinis, priva vera rationis, inops religionis,
 imposita veritatis, scrupulosissimo cultu, insolentissimo spreto
 Deus negligit, pars in Superstitionem, pars in contemptum, imida, vel tumida. Apud de Deo Socr.*

Grant none but they the narrow Path can hit— 560
 When will two Wits allow each other Wit?

Far other views the solid mind employ,
 A bounded prospect, but a surer joy:—
 True Knowledge when she conquers or abstains,
 Like the true Hero, equal glory gains. 565
 This, this is Science, sacred in its end,
 True to the views of heav'n, one's self, and friend:
 The earliest study, as the latest care,
 The surest refuge, and the only pray'r.

‘ O Thou, the God, who high in Heav'n presides,
 ‘ Whose eye o'ersees me, and whose wisdom guides,
 ‘ Deal me that Portion of Content and Rest,
 ‘ That unknown Health, and Peace, which suit me
 ‘ best:

‘ Save me from all the Guilt, and all the Pain,
 ‘ That lust of pleasure brings, and lust of gain; 580
 ‘ In Trial fix me, and in Peril shade,
 ‘ 'Gainst Foes protect me, 'gainst my Passions aid;
 ‘ In Wealth my guardian, and in Want my guide,
 ‘ 'Twixt a mean Flattery, and a drunken Pride:
 ‘ With Life's more dear Sensations warm my heart,
 ‘ Transport to feel, Benevolence's impart, 585
 ‘ Each homefelt Joy, each publick Duty send,
 ‘ Make me, and give me, all things in the Friend!

‘ But most protect and guard me in a Mind,
 ‘ Not rashly bold, nor abjectly resign'd: 590
 ‘ And oh, when Interest ev'ry Virtue hides,
 ‘ When Error blinds, and Prejudice misguides,
 ‘ Alike thy Grace, alike thy Truth impart,
 ‘ Beam on my Soul, and triumph o'er my Heart!

‘ Thus let me live unheard of, or forgot, 595
 ‘ My wealth Content, praise Silence, truth my Lot;

- Thy Word, O God! my Science and Delight,
 - Task of my Day, and Transport of my Night:
 - There taught, that he who suffers is but try'd,
 - And he who wanders, still may find a guide, 660
 - Sanction with Truth, Reward with Virtue join'd,
 - Life without end, and Laws that reach the mind!
 - Happy the Man, that such a Guide can take,
 - Whose Character is, never to forsake!
-

*Desine quapropter novitate exterritus ipsa,
 Expuere ex animo Rationem, sed magis acri
 Iudicio perpende, Et si tibi vera videtur
 Dede manus, aut si falsa est, a. cingere contra.*

LUCRET. L. 2.

Dublin, March 25th, 1735.

GEORGE FAULKNER, Printer and Book-seller in Essex-street, Dublin, having met with great Encouragement from the Nobility and Gentry of Great-Britain and Ireland for four Volumes, which he hath lately published, of the Writings of the Revd. J. S., D. D., D. S. P. D. proposeth to publish two Volumes more of the said Author's Works, consisting of political Tracts; and many Pieces both in Verse and Prose never before published.

I. The Books shall be printed in a new Dutch Type, on a fine Gems Paper, in large Octavo, in the same Size and Manner as the four first Volumes, which contained, I. The Author's Miscellanies in Prose. II. His Poetical Works. III. The Travels of Capt. LEMUEL GULLIVER. IV. The Drapier's Letters, and other Papers relating to Ireland.

II. The Price is 8 s. 8 d. to Subscribers, 4 s. 4 d. to be paid at the Time of subscribing, and the Remainder on the Delivery of the Books.

III. As soon as a sufficient Number is subscribed for, the Books shall be put to the Press, and finished with all possible Expedition.

Subscriptions are taken in by the Undertaker, Printer hereof; by Alderman Bennet in Cork, and by the Widow Dawson in Londonderry.

N. B. The Books shall not be sold to any but the Subscribers for less than half a Guinea.

